

Good as Gould Goalie School Philosophy & Structure

PHILOSOPHY:

The Good As Gould goalie school believes in allowing goaltenders to develop and improve their own style of goaltending. We believe that while each goaltender is unique in their technique they all have a common need for technical development, concentration, strength, flexibility and control of game situations.

The school therefore strives to combine a broad development of the goalie's knowledge of the game with a focused enhancement to each goalie's individual techniques. Our goal is achieved by providing a balanced curriculum of off-ice training classroom instruction, on-ice training and video analysis with the best instructors available.

STRUCTURE:

Each day the goalies train off-ice, practicing a number of drills which will enhance physiological and psychological development.

The classroom instruction covers such topics as equipment, mental game preparation, game situation analysis and continuing self-improvement. Goalies will watch video tape of their previous day's practice, to be analyzed by the instructors.

The on-ice sessions are broken into 6 stations. Each station has one instructor, two shooters and covers essential skills such as v-saves, stack saves, glove and blocker saves, out-of-net play, rebound control, breakaways, etc.

Goalies receive the highest quality instruction for a limited number of goalies. The low student/instructor ratio allows each goalie to practice more in a given time slot, and allows the instructors to get to know each goalie's specific needs.
